I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia and Constipation. I had no appetite, became greatly debilitated, and was constinutly afflicted with Headache and Dizziness. I consulted our family doctor, who prescribed for me, at various times, without affording more than temporary relief. I finally commenced taking Ayer's Pills. STARR & MILLS.

STYLISH MILLINERY. The Leading Pestures of Hats and Bonnets Intended for Summer West.

DECATUR, ILLINOIS, FRIDAY, JUNE 3, 1887.

A noticeable feature of the new millinery is the combination of velvet with the most diaphanous fabrics, lace, tulle and gauze. The velvet is in some in-stances used for a soft puffed crown, and the brim is either entirely of tulle, or it is of velvet veiled or edged with tulle; in other instances the velvet forms the full puffed front, and the soft rown is of tulle, shirred or puffed. Laces of various kinds, both black and colored, in trimming widths, enter conspicuously into dressy millinery, and a favorite disposition of this garniture is in upright fans, sometimes double, so turned that they form a sort of calyx surrounding aigrettes and piquets of fine flowers, that stand up from the center in a most aggressive fashion.

Lace handkerchiefs, in black and colors, are new this season, and are often utilized in the manner above described, or they form bristling bows with four pointed ends, or are bunched and draped over the crown, or disposed in a hundred different ways that only the deft fingers of an artist can accomplish, and no one can describe. Some of these are in Chantilly patterns, others have the more pronounced Spanish and guipure designs; and there are embroidered squares of gauze that are used in the same general way.

Exquisitely embroidered fabrics in Gobelin colors are combined with velvet, gauze and lace; and there are embroidered silks that have gold, silver, beads and spanglos intermixed, which are very rich and effective. Beads in black and all fashionable colors appear as an embellishment on almost every fabric used for millinery, and hats and bonnets are made entirely of beads. black and colored, strung on wires and interlaced in a trellis pattern, a wired lace to match forming or supplementing the brim.

Flowers are employed in profusion, and the handsomest are made of velvet, which imparts to them the deep rich tints characteristic of the darker varieties. A trellis bonnet, made entirely of fine jet, is trimmed with velvet nasturtium blossoms of the natural size, so perfect in coloring that they are hardly distinguishable from the natural blooms. Sprays of lilac and heliotrope are also especially lovely made in this material.

A novel manner of arranging flowers on bonnets is to place a lovely tied cluster, or "posy," about the middle of the crown, the nodding blooms standing up toward the front and usually showing above it. The strings generally start from this cluster, the upper ends arranged in loops that set upper ends arranged in loops that set up against the flowers, concealing the stems, or they are tied in a bow about the stems, which appear as if just cut from the parent stalk.

Fine flowers are used in piquets, or aigrette-like sprays, and also for bordering brims, sometimes all the way around, especially those that have the peaked front and back to match, when the flowers are used to fill in both openings. Bonnets in this shape are to be worn without strings; other bonnets have long strings, from two to three and a half inches in width, and and many of the fancy sorts are en-tiched with beads or embroidery. A line braid of the satin variety, in a light brown tint, has fine gilt cords and bronze heads interwoven with it, is sewed round and round on a frame, while the brim is of plain satin braid. Various fine straws and fancy kinds like the lace straws are woven in sheets, which are plaited and folded and pinched to form crowns for both bonnets and hats, and are so artistically manipulated that they do not appear as stiff as might be supposed. There are handsome laces of straw, some of them delicately fine, that trim very effectively.

Most of the hats are intended to be worn over the face; and it is predicted that young ladies will wear this style of head-gear for all purposes this season, and leave bonnets to matrous and "elderly" young ladies. Brims are of uregular widths; sometimes quite broad in front, quite narrow at one side and at the back, and so wide on the other side that when turned up against the crown, as most of then are, they reach quite to the top of it. There are shapes like English walking hats, with the brim turned up sharply and close to the crown at the sides, the front square and projecting, and no brim at all at the back; and the same effect is noticeable in hats with the brim outstanding in front and at the sides and either cut off or pinched up into flutes or turned up squarely against the crown. In these shapes the trimming is almost invariably disposed at the back.

There are Tuscaps and fine Milans and fancy straws of the same class that will be used for dressy hats; but the 35c and 50c Fancy Feather Fans, for 25c each. solid-colored English straws and mixed braids will remain the choice for ordinary wear. These are trimmed with most unlimited degree. - Demorest's

England. THE "TIMES" ATTACK UPON MR. GLADSTONE LONDON, June 3 — Renawing its attacks upon Mr. Gladstone, the Time says the ex-Premier has gradually fallen from his high estate until at last he is found to ciated with the most unmitigated scoundrels on the earth, who are banded together to work the nefarious onds of Alexander Sullivan and Patrick Egan. The Parnellites have ceased to take notice of the attacks of the Times, and, to a great degree, the Tories are pursuing the same course Realizing that the passage of the Corcion bill no longer depends up on the weakening of the Liberal strength, or the degradation of the Home Rule members, Tories are revolting against the methods of warfare adopted by the Times, and many even go so far as to re udiate its utterances CHAMBERLAIN'S SPEECH AT MAYCHESTER

LONDON, June 3.—Mr Joseph Chamber-lain, in a speech at Manchester last even ing, declared that Mr Gladstone's policy was calculated to destroy the country and ruin the working classes. Germany. PRINCE BISMARK'S REVELATIONS. BERLIN, June 3 -The revelations pub-lished by Prince Bismark in the Nord Deutsche Zeitung vesterday morning com-pletely nullifying the statements made by General Le Flo, are expected to further increase the diplomatic tension existing between Germany and France, and may, perhaps, result in a supture of relations, temporarily at least. The arrest at Strasburg Wednesday of two employes in the office of the president of the District of Lower Alsace for having been engaged in the practice of sending information concerning the movements, strength, etc. of the German military force in Algace to France has also increased the irritation here, and the incident will probably be the subject of diplomatic inquiry. The excitement over this latter case far exceeds in intensity that caused by the arrest of M Schnaebetes, and many believe that its settlement will be vastly more difficult and attended with sufinitely more danger to the peace of Germany and France than was the affair involving the French commis Greece

Fell Out of a Buggy. Just before noon to-day as Mrs. C. M. Allison was driving westward at the A. T. Hill corner her little daughter Clara, aged five years, fell out of the buggy and was severely injured by the wheels, how badly it cannot yet be determined. Luckily Mr. Allison, who was on his way home from the bank, was near at hand. The little girl was given immediate attention and taken home. She suffered no fracture. Mr. Allison thinks Clara will be running about again in a day or two.

In Camp. Life in camp near the Sangamon river, four miles east of the city, will be enjoyed for a week by a number of young men who will be visited by their Decatur friends on pleasant evenings. The camp ers are Walter Smick, Clyde Boyer, Fred Simpson, George Lytle, Harry Hamsher John Keister and Frank Hamsher. They are well provided with fishing tackle and food, and have a good camping outfit.

The Circus. The Sells Brothers' advertising car go in from Danville last night, and to-day the paste brigade is at work posting the illuminated bills on the boards. The men will put up about 1000 feet of paper for the show which is to come on June 21.

Collision. The fast mail train on the Central was two hours and a half late to-day, caused by a damaging freight train collision at El Paso, between Central and T., P. & W. trains. Nobody killed.

The Concert. The celebrated Schubert Quartette-Battel, Stone, Tyley and Iott-assisted by Miss Ada G. Edwards, soprano, and Miss Georgiana Lay, pianist, gave a charming vocal and instrumental concert at the opera house last night, which was most enthusiastically received. It was the occasion of Miss Edwards' first appearance with the quartette in this city where she is well known. The ovation tendered to this gifted vocalist was of a very flattering character. COMMENCEMENT DAY.

Thirty-Two Graduates Turned Ou of the Decatur High School.

Subjects of the Essays—A Bright Day, a Large Crowd, and Glad Hearts.

Shortly after 12 o'clock to-day the twentieth annual Commencement exercises of the Decatur High School terminated at the opers house, and 32 happy graduates received the long coveted diplomas and were admitted as members of the Alumni Association.

The bright, balmy weather has been all that could have been desired for the great holiday in the city schools, and this norning long before the opening of the doors a large crowd gathered in front of the opera house, all determined not to be shut out. When the curtain rose soon after 9 o'clock every foot of available space up-stairs and on the lower floor was occupied, while late-comers stood out in the hall elbowing each other to get a 22 and west half lot 23, in block 1, Quinview of the stage. It was the usual Comnencement crowd, the attendance speaking louder than words the interest and pride our people take in our free college. THE STAGE was neatly decorated with graceful loops of evergreens pendant from the top of the proscenium arch, and by a fence of evergreens at the front of the stage back of the footlights. Magnificent blooming and potted plants from the Burrows conservatory were arranged in front of the lence. Pendant from the flies was a canopy made of the American flag decked in he centre with a floral design. Back of all in white letters was the class motto, 'Hoc Facto, non omnia Finiuntur" (Though this be attained, all is not finished). The decorations were made by the members of the third-year class, ssisted by Miss French. THE EXERCISES.

Owing to the great length of the programme the Republican is unable to nake special mention of each essay. The topics are given below together with the names of the graduates. Those whose names are marked with a star took part in the musical selections, and were excused from "speaking their pieces," though under the regulations they prepared their essays. The exercises opened at 9:15 by singing of the hymn by the class and invocation by Rev. J. S. Hutchinson, of the United Brethren church. OPENING HYMN

REMARKS. At the recess hour, 11 o'clock, Mr. Gastman took occasion to thank Mansger Haines, of the opera house, for his untiring efforts in contributing to the Berry, of the Musical College, for assistance in the vocal numbers, to Mr. L. Burrows for his contribution of flowers, and to the third year class for their care in arranging the decorations.

In conclusion Mr. Castman remarked that to-day closed the 25th year of his term as superintendent of the Decatur schools, that have grown and extended n usefulness with each passing year. Twenty years ago, in Powers' Hall, the first class graduated. D. P. Bunn was the first president of the board, and W. L. Hammer a director. The Stage.

Miss Jeffreys-Lewis will appear Tuesday night at the opera house. This is an important engagement because Miss Lewis has a fine company and is herself a star of the first magnitude. She will present on this occasion "Forget-me-not," and it will be one of the finest things of the entire season. Miss Lowis is just returning from an extended tour through California and the Pacific coast generally and the people out there are enthusiastic in her prinse. The San Francisco Call

What can be said of Miss Jeffreys Lewis? What need he said? To our mind she is the finest actrees to-day on mind she is the finest actrees to-day on the American stage, and certainly none living can approach her in those lines of character which she has made peculiarly her own. She has grown somewhat stout-er, but she has lost none of her beauty, while her acting is as impassioned, as grand, as vigorous, as pathetic and as powerful as ever. One of the greatest charms of her acting is her magnificent fooid expression. Lit up by the fire of a facial expression, lit up by the fire of a pair of beautiful, almost speaking eyes. Miss Lewis and support were called out after every act, and thunders of applause greeted the star in her greatest scenes.

A Costly Ride.

A distressing mishap occurred at the Edward street crossing of the Wabash road last evening, while Wabash freigh train 79 was pulling out for St. Louis. W. S. Johnson, a young man of 24, whose home is at Bath, N. Y., was on a flat car in company with another moneyless friend, stealing a ride to St. Louis. The train was going rapidly, when the two tramps were seen by the brakemen, one of whom, Sullivan by name, got down on the car and either pushed the trespassers off or eaused them to jump. Johnson fell with considerable force against a telegraph pole and his left leg was broken below the knee, the bone protruding through the flesh and tronsers, a piece of the bone over an inch long breaking off. The Drs. Chenoweth attended the unfortunate young man. He was taken to St. Mary's hospital. Amputation may be necessary. The matter will probably be investigated.

THE funeral of the late Mrs. William Gaebler, which took place from St. Patrick's church yesterday afternoon, was very largely attended by the friends of the family, many of whom had a personal equaintance with the deceased. Father Mackin spoke for about twenty minutes. He paid a deserved tribute to the christian life of the deceased, making special reference to her deeds of kindness in caring for the sick and becoming a mother to the orphans. The remains were taken to the Catholic cemetery for interment. In the cortege were nearly forty vehicles. success of the exercises, to Miss Anna | Charles Laux, John Frank, John H. The captain, who, to do him credit, had underneath his preposterously mean nature some bits of warmth and geniality and an occasional revelation of colossal humor, gave me the half of his own berth, which stood in me the half of his own betth, which stood in the side of another little six foot cabin at the rear of where we ate. This comparament was a queer place. The walls were filled with pictures of sea fights, and many worse than those pasted against the partitions and glossed over with varnish. The carpet, whose aggag pattern was obliterated with greese and tar, had been woven on an old ask loom and tar had been woven on an old oak loor and tar, had been woven of an out bas con-up at Eastport by our captain's grandmother, along about the time when the Enterprise took in the Boxer and the Constitution cap-tured the Guerriere in Portland and Boston harbors. The old hair tounge vawned and creaked with the ceaseless movement of the vessel, and nobody had the beart to burden it further. At the head of the bed stood the softly ticking ship's chronometer. Against the center of the forward partition was a lit-tle desk where the captain studied his courses, his logarithms and charts, and figured his his logarithms and charts, and ngured his "reckonings" and his gains; and over this, day and night, swung a very smoky lamp. Before this, as before a midnight shrine, I shall ever remember our captain; for, of wild nights, and almost all nights for that matter, clad only in drawers, undershirt, a content to be true wither shoes he reamed son wester hat and rubber shoes, he roame about this mite of a den like a caged bear, or snorted and sputtered at his desk, scratching and creaking on an old slate with a flinty pencil, and awearing the most terrible oaths one ever heard, as if to keep himself agrees-ble company. At these times an old brian root pipe stood out sidewise from his scraggy jaw. And he puffed, puffed, puffed. For certain reasons I am patient with those who love tobacco. But the grade of our captain's tobacco, the age of that briar root pipe, the condensed and recondensed sections of that smoke which could have been caught, spliced, twisted and hung up to dry, were something undoubtedly worse than Virgil and Dant encountered in the tenth gulf of old Lucifer's The old sait, too, resented anybody sleeping. The more I sneezed and strangled, the more he puffed. To vary this he would yell

"Main boom! top and lift!
Duvy take a fall!
Jib sheet! Tail rope!
Let go the hau!:" While the sleepy man at the wheel, startled with the unearthly commands, would yell back, "Ay, ay, sir!" at which our captain would chuckle, ogre like, all by himself. Then swear, snort, puff, and again— "I've often heard it told that the British seamen bold

Then this old sea dragon would take a whirl around the little cabin in front, until he had stirred up the tired mates and the cook, and they would rise up in the darkness armers say. But as the days grew into weeks, and we rent into the warmer latitudes, the manifold asperities of this sort of actual existence seemed to fade away, giving one who can apply the philosophy of patience and indiffer-ence to immediate surroundings extraordi-nary opportunity for the larger view and mary opportunity for the inger view and more generous study of sea folk and sea life.

One thing was made clear: A sailor's life is not the one sung in the ballads. It is an endless round of duties day and night. Take, for instance, our vessel. Two men and a materomprised each watch. The watches are each four hours night and day, with the exception of the two dog watches of two hours each. That is twelve hours of each twenty-four to hard labor and responsibility. Then there is endless setting and recting of sails; all hands are liable at any moment to be called on deck into service where danger is as great as service; the pumps are to be tend-od, for every ship leaks; the rails and guards are to be mended; the batches are always needing attention new sails must be "bent" in place of those lost in square; old sais must be patched; the cargo requires continual looking after, for if it "sinfts," God pity ali; the rigging is newly "served;" the anchors "beaten" and painted, the decks "tarred down," and night sud day there is never an end to "lashing" things fast and faster. It is a dog's life, and solors nearly all live like dogs and are treated like dogs. Out in the fo'castle there, their bunks are wretched fo'castle there, their bunks are wretched boxes that a land tramp would scorn. From port to haven they are in the same "togs," which never leave their bodies. The master himself, once a scaman, "gets even" by his own brutality and meanness. In the main their days are unrest, their nights unclean, their
